Guatemala ranks first in Central America Regional ecological diversity.

According to the National Council of Protected Areas, CONAP Guatemala ranks first in Central America in terms of regional diversity by its flora, fauna and ecosystems.

Despite being a small country, Guatemala is exceptional in terms of biological diversity compared to other countries and regions expressed CONAP, which argues that the country also ranks first in terms of endemic species.

Earth Magazine recommends visiting the Pacaya Volcano in Guatemala.

The article was written by photographer Michael Steel, who said: "The most popular volcano for tourists is the famous Pacaya Volcano, near Antigua Guatemala». According to the author, travel and climbing is for all levels, as it only takes a couple of hours to reach the top.

In addition to the Pacaya Volcano, Steel also mentions a little of the history of Antigua Guatemala.

The author explains about the weather, transportation, activities that can be done and even the culinary wonders of the country. This is not the first time the Pacaya Volcano resonates around the world, in the past has been used as commercial space to shoot amazing clips and has been mentioned in several international magazines such as National Geographic.
